

SARA GENN:
INFINITE PROMISE

JULY 14 – AUGUST 31, 2023

Infinite Promise

When asked recently about art's purpose, American record producer Rick Rubin replied that it was to say, "this is how I see it." I interpret this as confirmation of my own decades-deep investigation into seeing — and making things to be looked at and felt. To expand upon Rubin's remark; "This is how I feel it." My practice explores visual organization, color theory, the materiality of painting, and light's effects on that materiality, but at the heart of these technical considerations is an aesthetic philosophy I can best describe as, "anti-chaos." Anti-chaos is an invitation to find refuge, a pause, hopefulness and visual excitement in looking; and to reappraise looking — and the feelings and sensations this activity can conjure. I am also aware that looking is a privilege of the sighted, which makes it precious and also limits what I am trying to achieve aesthetically.

Infinite Promise is my answer to Winston Wächter's invitation to situate immersive suites of modular paintings within a space that holds its own architectural integrity, vibe, light effects, shadows and clarity. The eye wants to organize and also travel within spaces and within artworks. In this sense, and in the broader exploration of color and its relationship to itself and its environmental conditions, I invite visitors to consider an infinity of feelings.
